Don't Let New Jersey Bill 373 Pass!

NJ Bill 373, introduced to the NJ Senate in 2000 is an attempt to force inmates to pay for their own incarceration by placing an estimated debt of $25,000 for every year spent locked down. If unable to pay, the bill would give the state the right to seize and/or sell the property of inmates to cover the expenses as well as the right to drain their income. As of now, the bill has not been passed, but could be voted on anytime.

We, the undersigned demand that the NJ Senate throw out Bill 373. Far from decreasing incarceration rates, the Bill would provide excuses to lock up prisoners who are unable to pay, as well as strengthen the economic reasons crimes are committed in the first place, making meaningful rehabilitation even harder.
